The Bug Chef

David George Gordon

Explore Entomophagy (bug-eating)

Whether you loathe the sight of a cockroach or enjoy the fine delicacy of chocolate covered ants, world renowned biologist David George Gordon will teach you something about bugs you never knew before! The Bug Chef creates culinary masterpieces using ants, grasshoppers, water bugs, centipedes, scorpions and their kin. Yes, he actually prepares a variety of insect dishes for the students to try!

Culinary Masterpieces

Many cultures throughout the world consider bugs part of a meal and rely on this form of food for survival. This show explores entomophagy (bug-eating), and offers practical advice on obtaining and preparing crickets, mealworms, bee larvae and other bug delicacies. Students will help prepare a sumptuous bug dish on-stage, followed by an invitation by all to sample the exotic fare -- truly educational and fun, this is an experience you never will forget!

Audience Participation

Whether deep-frying tarantulas or telling gardens how to peacefully coexist with snails and slugs in their flower beds, David George Gordon delivers public programs that are informative, insightful, and outright entertaining! K-12.
